"GALLIOLI"

Washington, May 25.—"The city of Gallipoli, toward which the allied forces are fighting, guards the neck of the Gallipoli peninsula, where the peninsula joins the mainland, near the elbow formed by the Dardanelles strait and the Sea of Marmora," begins a bulletin issued today by the National Geographic Society. The description of this key position to the best protected of all of the world's water avenues, a position to which the interest of all the nations is now turned with much questioning, continues:

"Gallipoli is the last bar that locks the Dardanelles, and secures Marmora sea as a Turkish lake. It is a powerful fortified city, its defensive works having begun in modern style in 1878, when the Russians threatened to take possession of Constantinople. The work of strengthening this port has been carried on at irregular intervals since. When the Bulgarians were attacking the lines at Chatalja, the Turks, who felt that they might expect an endeavor to turn their flanks by way of Gallipoli and Marmora sea, worked feverishly upon the port's redoubts. White Gallipoli is not comparable in strength to the great fortresses of Europe, it, nevertheless, with its modern batteries and extensive outworks, forms a proper conclusion to the mightily fortified water lane leading down the Aegean sea.

"This 'City Beautiful' of the Greeks (Kallipolis) was the first point in Europe to be won and maintained by the Ottoman hordes. It is today anything but a beautiful city. Its streets are narrow, immemorial and dirty, while most of its houses are overgrown wooden structures. There are few buildings of any architectural interest, though the great leaden-domed bazaars appeal to the imagination of the westerner. Some few and uncareful for relics of Eastern Empire and Grecian times have been left to normal decay by the Turks.

"Gallipoli has two good harbors. Both harbors have been improved, one of them serving as the principal roadstead of the Turkish fleet. Gallipoli is 132 miles west-southwest of Constantinople, the city which its guns are meant to guard, and it is 90 miles south of Adrianople, the powerful fortress toward the Bulgarian frontier. The Dardanelles at Gallipoli are about two miles wide, their expanse being completely dominated by the guns of the port.

"Until Turkish occupation and the putting into effect of the suspicious, intolerant and short-sighted policies of exclusion and exclusiveness of the Orient, Gallipoli seemed destined, as a well-placed spot upon one of nature's natural avenues of water trade, to become one of the greatest of all the commercial cities of the Near East. Through the centuries of Turkish rule, it has slept an almost dreamless sleep. Today, with a population of 25,000, with few ambitions, and little understanding of its advantages, it has, however, given, under the Young Turk regime, some evidence of a re-awakening."

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY'S REASON FOR REJECTING THE DEMANDS OF ITALY.

Washington, May 26.—"Austria-Hungary's reason for rejecting the demands of Italy is said to be her view that it would have resulted in an effective check-mating of both her commercial and her political interests on the Adriatic and the Mediterranean, almost as thoroughly as were her Aegean ambitions destroyed following the successful struggle of the Balkan States with Turkey and the establishment of a Greater Serbia," says a bulletin issued today by the National Geographic Society, which discusses the Italian demands as reported from Rome. "These demands, the Dual Monarchy contended, were planned to give Italy strategic control, naval and commercial, of the Adriatic, and also that their acceptance by Vienna would have struck a vital blow at the monarchy's future."

"As minimum concessions, Italy asked the cession of the province of Trent in the Austrian Tyrol; the cession of eastern Friuli east to Nabresina; the formation of a state entirely independent of Austria out of the territories, Trieste and Istria; cession to Italy of the dominant islands off the lower Dalmatian coast, Curzola, Lissa, Lesina, Brazza and Maleda; the abandonment of Austrian interests in Albania, and Austrian acknowledgment of Italian sovereignty over the Albanian port and great land-locked bay, Avlona. These concessions would have changed the status of the Mediterranean from that of an Austro-Italian lake to that of an Italian lake."

"Such parts of the Dual Monarchy's coast line as Italy would have left in its undisputed possession is territory that Serbia hopes to get some day in the course of her natural expansion. To meet the minimum demands expressed by Rome, Austria must have surrendered her greatest seaport, Trieste, the New York of southern Europe, together with her principal naval base, Pola, at the apex of Istria, upon whose development the Dual Monarchy has invested many millions of dollars, and must have abandoned all hope of the strategic value of the Dalmatian coast with the cession to Italy of the large islands that screen it. Deprived of her Adriatic seacoast, her only outlet to free water, Austria-Hungary felt that she would finally sink to the importance of a portless, land-bound Serbia."

"Besides Italy's rivalry with Austria for leadership upon the Mediterranean, 'irredentism' played a strong part in the determination of her demands. 'Irredentism' is the desire of various nations to bring within their boundaries contiguous areas inhabited by the same race, speaking the same language and filled with the same ideals. 'Irredentism' is an enthusiasm widely spread in Europe, an enthusiasm that has succeeded in greatly complicating the issues of the present war. Thus, the Germans claim that the Baltic provinces are German, and must be reunited to their fatherland; Roumania with still more reason, holds Transylvania and Bukovina as 'unredeemed Roumania,' and this prevents her from reaching an understanding with the Germanic powers; Bosnia and Herzegovina are 'unredeemed lands' to Serbia, while Russia sees in Germany's Polish provinces Slavonic lands in Teutonic bondage."

"Italian irredentism affects not only Austria, but, also, France. The French paid themselves for their valuable aid to Italy's cause of unity on the field of Solferino, by enriching themselves with Savoy and Nice. Thus, Italian irredentism looks to lands and countrymen lost to France as well as to Austria. The Trent province of Tyrol was demanded of Austria by the Italians solely on the basis of unredeemed Italian land; this land had been Italy's and it was peopled by Italians who have clung to their mother-tongue. Likewise, the coastlands around the Gulf of Trieste and around the Istrian peninsula are largely inhabited by Italian-speaking people, though some of this territory has been in Austrian possession for centuries. Below Fiume, the Austrian coastland is peopled almost exclusively by Slavonic races. Up to Fiume, irredentism, or the movement to deliver fellow countrymen from the rule of strange people, was the main-spring of Italian action. Beyond Fiume, political and commercial rivalries dictated the Italian course."

RICHARD JOHNSTON STIVERS.

Out of great tragedies spring noble poems to comfort and to bless. Young Richard Johnston Stivers, of Ripley, O., under a great mental strain, snapped his life cord and brought to a close what promised a full life of happiness and joys. His fellow students at Yale College expressed to his grief-stricken parents their love of young Stivers through notable poems, chief and foremost of which is this exquisite bit of verse, which we publish with the wish of sending on what we believe to be a classic, "Mizpah," by George S. Patterson:

MIZPAH.

Upon the death of R. J. S., March 8, 1915.
Upon the darkened house there broods the Ghost
Of Yesterday's; gaunt, dry-eyed Sorrow stalks
With velvet tread among the empty throng.
The cold damp wind, that blows across a grave,
Wide-mouthed and newly-made, has touched him; yet—
Still blows, and moans, and sighs about the hearth,
Like Nature's dying breath among the leaves.
So we who sit before the empty chair,
Where seeing Eyes stare from its vacancy,
Feel that Ice Wind, that mouldy, earthborn breeze,
And start and turn, as though upon our backs
The fleshless hand of our dread host were laid.
Ah, Fate unkind to snip the glist'ning thread,
The woof and web of which God's sunshine wove!

But fools ask why? Why grow the trees?
Why falls the rain? Why slants the shade
Across some flower in the glade?
Small fool! That all-conceiving Mind made thee—
Yet does thy petty logic ask "Wherefore?"
Enough! Our friend, our dearest friend is gone.
We stride abreast, we two, adown the path.
Upon him fell a shadow, and I stood
Alone, it seemed. My heart fair leaped with pain;
I thought him snatched from out my life. But, hark—
The silver cascade of a laugh
Surrounds me, standing there;
It echoes in the rippling rills,
It murmurs in the crouching hills,
It plays among the daffodils,
It brightens all the air.

He lives, whom men call dead; this Nature-child,
Conceived of shade and shine! His soul returned
From whence it came, to sky and rock and hill.
A little while—a winking of Time's eye—
And in a pleasant valley, Thou and I,
Immortal Friends, shall be forever near
In the eternal shadow of His Throne.
By George Sterling Patterson, 15 S.

Marconi Has Machine That Makes Wall or Floor Transparent—Uncanny Qualities of Invention Being Studied.

New York, May 25.—Guglielmo Marconi, to whom humanity is indebted for the wireless telegraph, has made it known that the time is almost here when, if he chooses to give to science the secret of a new apparatus he has invented, it will be possible for persons on one side of a solid partition to observe what is happening in the adjoining room.

The possibilities for evil involved in this amazing invention have made its discoverer reluctant to make it known to the world until he is fully acquainted with all its uncanny qualities, and he admits that it might be some time before he would feel justified in giving a demonstration to his fellow-scientists.

The apparatus in its present state resembles a camera. When placed against a wall or floor it

LOSING HOPE WOMAN VERY ILL

Finally Restored To Health By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bellevue, Ohio.—"I was in a terrible state before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My back ached until I thought it would break, I had pains all over me, nervous feelings and periodic troubles. I was very weak and was losing hope of ever being well and strong. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I improved rapidly and today am a well woman. I cannot tell you how happy I feel and I cannot say too much for your Compound. Would not be without it in the house if it cost three times the amount."—Mrs. CHAS. CHAPMAN, R. F. D. No. 7, Bellevue, Ohio.
